LAWYERS FOR PEOPLE OF MODERATE MEANS. By: Barlow F. Christensen. Chicago: American Bar Foundation. 1970. Pp. xviii, 313. $7.50, paper $5.00.

This work is based upon a 1965 project directed by Mr. Christensen on the Availability of Legal Services conducted for the American Bar Association Special Committee on this subject. The author presents a concise analysis of a pressing problem of our society. The work points out the need for quality legal assistance for persons of low and middle income. It explores the various methods by which legal services could be made more available through such programs as legal service insurance, group legal service arrangements, and improved lawyer referral services. In general, this work gives a good overview of steps taken by the legal profession to help ease this problem.

THE SUPERLAWYERS. By: Joseph C. Goulden. New York: Weybright and Talley. 1972. Pp. 408, Acknowledgements and Sources, Index. $8.95.

Joseph Goulden, an investigative reporter whose previous interests have ranged from the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to the Gulf of Tonkin incidents, turns his attention to that elite and powerful breed, the Washington lawyer. The work is filled with fascinating accounts of the doings within and without government of well-known figures such as Clark Clifford, Tommy Corcoran and Gerhard Gesell. The final chapter examines the new, public-interest Washington lawyer and offers a few insipid suggestions for controlling the actions of the older breed. It is based for the most part on interviews. Although the author does not answer all the issues that he raises, it is well-written and makes delightful, descriptive, and sometimes appalling reading.

WHO JUDGES THE JUDGES? By: William Thomas Braithwaite. Chicago: American Bar Foundation. 1971. Pp. xviii, 167. $5.50, paper $2.95.

This work selects five states for study in dealing with the problem of judicial misconduct or disability. By using specific cases from the states of California, Illinois, Missouri, New Jersey and New York, Mr. Braithwaite is able to give a concise analysis of how problems involving judicial behavior are handled. Performance and subsequent retirement of the judges are the focal points of the work. It explores many of the new procedures in operation today that specifically deal with the retirement problem. Mr. Braithwaite practices law in Chicago, Illinois, but at the time of the research for this publication, he was a research attorney for the American Bar Foundation.

THEORIES OF PUNISHMENT. Edited by: Stanley E. Grupp. Bloomington: Indiana University Press. 1972. (copyright 1971). Pp. 401. $12.50.

Mr. Grupp, Professor of Sociology at Illinois State University at Normal, has gathered in this work a collection of articles on the various schools of thought on punishment: retribution, deterrence, rehabilitation, and the integrative theory. The essays are from varied authorities enabling the reader to draw his own conclusions on each theory.

LESOTHO. By: Vernon V. Palmer and Sebastian M. Poulter. Charlottesville: The Michie Company. 1972. Pp. xxi, 574 and Appendices, Table of cases, and Index. $20.00.

This work is one volume of a multi-volume series which studies the legal systems of the African Nations. Mr. Palmer, a lecturer in law at the University of Botswana in Lesotho, and Mr. Poulter, presently at Oxford University writing a thesis and book on the Customary Family Law of Lesotho, discuss in this work the sources of law, constitutional development, and structure and jurisdiction of the courts of Lesotho. (Due to a coup d'etat in Lesotho, a cutoff date of January 1, 1970 was placed on the manuscript.)

PRIVATE POLICE IN THE UNITED STATES. R-869-DOJ. Pp. 109, $4.00; THE PRIVATE POLICE INDUSTRY. R-870-DOJ. Pp. 224, Appendices. $5.00; CURRENT REGULATION OF PRIVATE POLICE. R-871-DOJ. Pp. 86, Appendices. $5.00; THE LAW AND PRIVATE POLICE. R-872-DOJ. Pp. 208, $5.00; SPECIAL PURPOSE PUBLIC POLICE. R-873-DOJ. Pp. 70, $3.00. By: James S. Kabalib and Sorrel Wildhorn. Santa Monica, California: The Rand Corporation, 1971.

The authors have composed a comprehensive report on the Private Police Industry in the United States. The five volume report describes the industry, analyzes policies (both of the industry and the regulatory agencies), and recommends alternative policies.
