Editor:

This fall, the job listings and all related information, applications, and materials will be located in a new Law Placement Center on the second floor of the One East Mount Royal Avenue building. The center will be available to law students and alumni during the hours that the building itself is open (including evening hours) and because of the addition of three new classrooms at that location, the exposure for day and evening students will be increased. The job listings for current students and alumni will be listed in a completed fashion rather than the two-card system currently used and will be posted in glass enclosed bulletin boards for security.

I would be remiss if I did not outline at least part of the reason for this relocation. Although we have needed a law placement facility for some time, the relocation is due in part to the consistent thefts and destruction of placement information. Increasingly, job postings and other informational postings are either removed or destroyed. Publications such as Martindale-Hubble and ABA job descriptions are stolen, mutilated or removed. Publications which read "DO NOT REMOVE" are borrowed and never returned. Of course, we could have students sign for everything and keep the items behind locked cabinets, but this is costly and time consuming and takes away from the more important function of trying to secure job leads.

These thefts have been on-going for the past 2½ years and now some effort must be made to secure the postings as our budget does not permit the replacement of these publication several times a year. We cannot expect an employer to contact us a second time if we send him no prospects the first time. I might add that the theft of notices and publications is an honor code violation.

I realize that this new arrangement may cause a hardship to a few students. However, this is the only way I can be sure that every job posting and every brochure and every book on placement will remain available to every student looking for a job.

Yours very truly,
William I. Weston
Assistant Dean
