SYMPOSIUM

Developments in International Commercial Law

The University of Baltimore Law Review is pleased to present this Special Symposium Issue on Developments in International Commercial Law, sponsored in part by the Center for International and Comparative Law.

The Center for International and Comparative Law sponsors an Annual Symposium on topics of significance to the international law community. The Center's 1996 Symposium focused on the subject of international commercial law. Some of the lectures presented at the Symposium are reprinted below. These lectures, originally presented orally, have been edited to conform to formal law review format.

The Center for International and Comparative Law also sponsors an annual essay competition among the student community at the University of Baltimore. One of the two winning pieces from the 1997 Essay Competition is reprinted below.
