ERRATA

The University of Baltimore Law Review regrets the following error occurring in Beryl Blaustone, Improving Clinical Judgment in Lawyering with Multidisciplinary Knowledge About Brain Function and Human Behavior: What Should Law Students Learn About Human Behavior for Effective Lawyering?, 40 U. BALT. L. REV. 607 (2011). We offer this correction and apologize for any inconvenience.

In footnote 128, the second sentence should read:

Professor Margaret A. Berger, renowned evidence law professor and legal scholar, conducted studies among her law students at Brooklyn Law School to demonstrate for them that their inaccurate recall of external facts was substantial and that their conviction of belief reinforced those inaccuracies.
