
Richard E. Guida
only after a verdict was returned that the trial court “exercising its perceived power to engage in judicial hindsight, stated that it should never have permitted the case to continue and sua sponte embarked on the sanctions phase of the trial.” Id. at 478, 568 A.2d at 863.

Although the court conceded that justified sanctions could be imposed for conduct during the trial, such as dilatory tactics or abusive conduct, no such allegations were ever made. Id. at 479, 568 A.2d at 864. Accordingly, the court held that because the evidence was sufficiently debatable to deny motions throughout the trial, it was sufficient to justify Gerst in bringing and continuing her case. Id. Thus, the court of special appeals concluded that the trial court's decision was clearly erroneous. Id. at 479-80, 568 A.2d at 864.

In so ruling, the Court of Special Appeals of Maryland once again clearly discouraged the excessive use of Rule 1-341 sanctions. Such use can only impose a chilling effect on a plaintiff's right to court access, while providing an uncertain environment for attorneys to act. As the court opined, Rule 1-341 should only be used in the most extreme of instances when a claim is clearly meritorious and intended to remedy only intentional misconduct.

—Vasiliki Papaioannou

Pavelic & LeFlore v. Marvel Entertainment Group: SANCTIONS FOR VIOLATION OF FEDERAL RULE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE 11 ONLY APPLY TO THE INDIVIDUAL SIGNER

In Pavelic & LeFlore v. Marvel Entertainment Group, 110 S. Ct. 456 (1989), the United States Supreme Court held that sanctions provided by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 11 (“Rule 11”) only applied to the attorney who signed a paper in violation of Rule 11, even if the attorney explicitly signed on behalf of his firm.

On behalf of Northern J. Calloway, attorney Ray L. LeFlore brought a willful copyright infringement claim in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York against Marvel Entertainment Group (“Marvel”). In an amended complaint, Calloway alleged that Marvel forged his signature. After initiation of the claim, LeFlore formed the law partnership of Pavelic & LeFlore with Radovan Pavelic. Several papers relying on the allegation of forgery were signed:

“Pavelic & LeFlore
By /s/ Ray L. LeFlore
(A Member of the Firm)
Attorneys for Plaintiff.”

Id. at 457. The district court found that these papers were in violation of Rule 11 and imposed a sanction in the amount of $100,000 against Pavelic & LeFlore. Upon a motion by Radovan Pavelic, the district court shifted half of the sanction from the firm to LeFlore, because the firm did not exist during the major part of the litigation. However, the district court rejected Pavelic's contention that Rule 11 only empowered the court to impose the sanction upon LeFlore and not upon the firm. The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit affirmed the sanction. The Second Circuit's decision directly conflicted with a Fifth Circuit holding that authorized Rule 11 sanctions against only the individual signers. Id. at 458 citing Robinson v. National Cash Register Co., 808 F.2d 1119, 1128-30 (1987).

Pavelic appealed to the United States Supreme Court and was granted certiorari. In an opinion by Justice Scalia, the Court agreed with the Fifth Circuit and reversed the Second Circuit. In interpreting Rule 11, the Court relied on the plain meaning of the rule. Pavelic & LeFlore, 110 S. Ct. at 458 (citing Walker v. Arnco Steel Corp., 446 U.S. 740, 750 n.9 (1980)).

Where a pleading, motion, or other paper violates Rule 11, the rule requires the trial court to “impose upon the person who signed it . . . an appropriate sanction.” Id. The Court noted that if viewed in isolation, the phrase “person who signed” is ambiguous. Id. However, upon reading the phrase in the entire context of Rule 11, the Court reasoned that since Rule 11 begins “with a requirement of individual signature, and then proceed[s] to discuss the import and consequences of signature, . . . references to the signature in the later portions must reasonably be thought to connote the individual signer mentioned at the outset.” Id.

In rejecting Marvel's contention that the legal principles of partnership and agency should apply, the Court emphasized that Rule 11 established a duty that an attorney could not delegate. Id. at 459. The Court also held that although LeFlore explicitly signed on behalf of his firm, the sanction only applied to LeFlore individually. The Court reasoned that a signature on behalf of a firm could not comply with the first sentence of Rule 11, since it requires papers to be signed “by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's individual name.” Id. The Court noted that in the past, the preferred practice for an attorney was to sign on his own behalf with the name of his firm beneath. Id. (citing Gavitt, The New Federal Rules and State Procedure, 25 A.B.A.J. 367, 371 (1939)).

Although a law firm may have more funds than an individual signer, the Court noted that the purpose of the sanction was punishment rather than reimbursement. The Court also noted that the function “of Rule 11 as a whole is to bring home to the individual signer his personal, nondelegable responsibility.” Id. at 460. Moreover, the Supreme Court determined that holding an individual signer personally liable provides a greater economic deterrent.

In a lone dissent, Justice Marshall argued that Rule 11 sanctions can apply to a law firm. At first, the rule uses the term “signer,” but later in its discussion of sanctions, the rule uses the phrase “the person who signed.” Id. at 461 (Marshall, J., dissenting). The dissent noted that in the context of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, one could reasonably assume that the drafters meant the term "person" to include partnerships and professional corporations. Id. (Marshall, J., dissenting) (citing 5 U.S.C. § 551 (2); N.Y. Partnership Law § 2 (McKinney 1988)). Recognizing that the sanction should be tailored to each situation, Justice Marshall opined that Rule 11 allowed the trial judge to decide whether sanctions would more properly be applied to the attorney or his law firm. Id. at 462 (Marshall, J., dissenting). Justice Marshall reasoned that individual accountability may be heightened if an attorney's negligence also subjected his law firm to liability. Id. at 461-62 (Marshall, J., dissenting).

In holding that Rule 11 sanctions apply only to the attorney who signs a paper in violation of the rule, the United States Supreme Court precluded the application of Rule 11 sanctions to law firms. As a result, parties may find it more difficult to collect reimbursement for expenses caused by Rule 11 violations, but personal liability may provide a greater incentive for attorneys to comply with Rule 11.

—Richard E. Guida

Simpler v. State: POLICE MAY NOT FRISK A SUSPECT AS A MATTER OF ROUTINE CAUTION, THERE MUST BE A REASONABLE SUSPICION THAT THE SUSPECT IS ARMED AND DANGEROUS

In Simpler v. State, 318 Md. 311, 568 A.2d 22 (1990) the Court of Appeals of Maryland held the seizure of paraphernalia with marijuana residue was unconstitutional where the suspect was frisked without reasonable suspicion that he was armed and dangerous.

On the evening of May 8, 1987, Sergeant Wassmer (Wassmer), of the Cecil County Sheriff's Department, and a young explorer scout were on routine